MODULE 9

COPYRIGHT AND THE INTERNET: THE VIRTUAL ART MUSEUM

The world today does not function without “the internet”. We being humans have a curiosity for information, psychologically, so what better than the world wide web accessible on even the smallest gadget.

The Oxford dictionary describes internet as “a global computer network providing a variety of information and communication facilities, consisting of interconnected networks using standardized communication protocols”. In simple terms, it connects one computer to any other computer around the world and can be accessed almost anywhere by numerous means.

This discovery of internet which took place in 1970, today has been a boost to every field of information and knowledge. In recent times, the internet has served the purpose of sharing ideas and ideologies with large number of people just by one click. Social networking sites, blogging, publishing article online, public forum discussions etc. are few example. Since entering the age of information, it has been realised that the effect of internet can be drastic. There are opportunities to hear new point of views, discover new technologies and break down long standing barriers. However, the spread of computing and the Internet have made it difficult to apply traditional intellectual property laws. Despite popular belief, just because it's easy to distribute information using the Internet does not mean that it's right to do so¹.

This module encompasses various methods, laws, cases and other important aspects of protection of intellectual property rights on the internet.

3.1 COPYRIGHT PROTECTION

The biggest asset that an individual or an organisation has in this expression of ideas on the internet, is the intellectual property right in it. Intellectual Property being, “original creative work manifested in a tangible form that can be legally protected”².

Such intangible asset on the internet should also be protected under the law. Among all the kinds of intellectual property i.e. Copyright, Trademark, Patents, Geographical Indications etc., Copyright is the most crucial to be protected when it comes to material on the internet. Works covered by
